4. Course General Description:

This course is designed for PhD students in Applied Linguistics to explore complex and contemporary issues within the field of applied linguistics. This course delves into the intricate relationships between language, thought, and society, examining key themes such as linguistic relativity, bilingualism, multilingualism, and the implications of these concepts for language education and policy. Students will critically engage with topics including linguistic complexity, interlanguage pragmatic competence, and the role of translanguaging in shaping identity and educational practices. Additionally, the course will address the influence of big data and corpora on language research, as well as the evolution of language in the context of digital communication and social media. Ultimately, this course aims to foster a deep understanding of the dynamic interplay between language and society, preparing students to contribute meaningfully to the field.

7. Course Main Objective(s):

The Advanced Topics in Applied Linguistics course aims to:

- Develop learners' ability to critically examine the relationship between language and thought, considering linguistic relativity and sociopolitical influences on language education.
- Enhance learners' understanding of linguistic complexity and interlanguage pragmatic competence to improve their analysis of language acquisition and intercultural communication.
- Strengthen learners' capacity to analyze bilingualism and multilingualism, including translanguaging practices, and apply these concepts to curriculum development and identity formation.
- Equip learners with the skills to evaluate the role of corpora and big data in language research and assess changes in language use in digital communication.
- Empower learners to conduct independent research, develop well-structured research inquiries, and advocate for inclusive language policies that support linguistic diversity and social justice.

F. Assessment of Course Quality:

Assessment Areas/Issues	Assessor	Assessment Methods
Effectiveness of teaching	Assessed by students, faculty, program leaders, and peer reviewers using direct feedback and evaluations.	Assessed through student evaluations, peer reviews, classroom observations, and teaching feedback surveys.
Effectiveness of students' assessment	Evaluated by students, faculty, and program leaders through exam performance, project outcomes, and feedback.	Evaluated through analysis of exam results, project outcomes, grading consistency, and student feedback.
Quality of learning resources	Reviewed by faculty and program leaders based on student feedback and peer reviews.	Reviewed via surveys, resource usage analytics, student and faculty feedback, and comparison with academic standards.
The extent to which CLOs have been achieved	Measured by faculty, program leaders, and peer reviewers using assessments, exams, and student portfolios.	Measured through direct assessments like exams, projects, portfolios, and indirect methods like student self-assessment and surveys.
Other	Assessed by a combination of students, faculty, program leaders, peer reviewers, and external evaluators using surveys, feedback forms, and reflective essays.	Assessed using qualitative feedback, focus groups, external reviews, and additional surveys tailored to specific concerns.
